SUBJECT Staff Response to Commission Inquiry - Subway Stations with Bicycle Racks

At its meeting of September 5, 2000, after receiving a deputation regarding the City of Toronto 1999 Cycling Study, the Commission directed that "staff report on what subway stations have bicycle racks, including specific entrance/exit locations where they are located." This memo responds to that request.

There are 60 subway stations in the TTC system. Of these, 47 stations have some amount of TTC-controlled property adjacent to them. These are listed in Table 1, attached. Of these, 45 stations have bicycle racks or posts in the immediate vicinity of at least one entrance. At Dufferin and Yorkdale Stations, TTC property adjacent to the station is so constrained that it is not possible to fit bicycle racks near the entrances without significantly interfering with passenger movements into and out of the station. At these two stations, it might be possible for the City to install bicycle racks or posts on City property, adjacent to the main entrances of the stations.

At the remaining 13 TTC subway stations -- mostly the older, downtown stations which are surrounded by development -- there is not enough TTC property available to fit in bicycle racks. These stations are: Bay, Bloor/Yonge, College, Dundas, King, Museum, Osgoode, Queen, Queen's Park, St. Andrew, St. Patrick, Union, and North York Centre. TTC customers who wish to lock their bicycles at these stations must rely on bicycle racks or posts which have been installed by the City in the vicinity of the station. There are City-installed bicycle racks or posts close to at least one of the entrances to all of these subway stations, with the exception of Osgoode Station.
